"He said to them, 'The harvest is abundant, but the laborers are few...'" LUKE 10:2

As Catholics we are all called to serve. However, many of us are unsure of what our charisms or gifts from the Holy Spirit are to help build God's Church. Through prayer we are able to discern how God is calling us. The next time your pastor or fellow parishioner asks you to join a committee, ask God first, if that is what He wants you to do with your gifts.

Peter's Pence Collection
Be a Witness of Charity

Next week, we will take up the Peter's Pence Collection, which provides Pope Francis with the funds he needs to carry out his charitable works around the world. The proceeds benefit our brothers and sisters on the margins of society, including victims of war, oppression, and natural disasters. Please be generous. For more information, visit www.usccb.org/

Called to be Bringers of Peace and Laborers in the Lord's Vineyard

One word that occurs in both the second reading and the gospel of today is “peace”. Paul speaks of the peace and mercy that come to all who follow the rule of Christ (Gal. 6: 16). And, in the Gospel, Jesus tells his disciples to bring peace with them to every house they enter. This peace is not dependent on outside circumstances. It can exist even when we are surrounded by storms. It is the peace Jesus experienced after his prayer in the garden. It is the peace that Paul experiences, even though he has had his share of the “cross of our Lord Jesus Christ” and who bears in his own body the marks of Jesus’ pain and suffering.

So, our task as Christians is to be bringers of peace. Of course, we need that peace and inner security within ourselves first. It is a peace that a close following of Jesus can bring. It is a peace that our conventional society, wracked as it is with so many externally caused stresses and fears and ambitions, seldom seems to know.

Also, in today’s Gospel Jesus says that “The harvest is abundant, but the laborers are few; so, ask the master of the harvest to send out laborers for his harvest.” Quite often, by “laborers” we think of priests, or religious brothers and sisters, those who have a “vocation.” However, it is doubtful that Jesus was thinking of priests and religious when he spoke those words. In fact, in the world of the New Testament there were no priests or religious as we understand those terms today. In the mind of Jesus – and in the mind of the early evangelists – everyone who was known as a follower of Christ was expected to be a laborer in the harvest field.

So, today Jesus calls us to become laborers with him in the harvest that is the society in which we live. It is a society that seems so rich and prosperous and yet is so impoverished of the security and peace it so frenetically seeks to find. We are called today to labor so that our society may be gradually transformed into a place where the values of the Gospel, often so little understood even by ourselves, will prevail.

Jesus sent out his seventy-two disciples “to all the places he himself was to visit” (Lk 10: 6). That is an interesting remark. Who comes first to any place? Is it Jesus or me? As a person baptised in Jesus’ name, I am a part of his Body. Where the body is, there, too, is the person. Where I go then, Jesus also comes to visit. Jesus does not go before us. Nor does he come after us. We come together!

But if I do not go, if I do not reach out, then to some extent Jesus does not go, Jesus does not reach out. I am part of his Body; I am the visible indication of his presence. My voice is his voice. “Who hears you, hears me,” he told his disciples once. If I do not speak his message, who will get to hear it?

The disciples came back from their mission rejoicing and excited. They discovered they could do the same things that Jesus was doing. So, can we. And, unless we try, we are not worthy of our baptism, which becomes an empty ritual like circumcision.

But where do I start? I cannot single-handedly convert the whole of my society! We can, however, follow the example of someone like Mother Teresa. She realised that there were thousands and thousands of the poor, destitute and dying who needed her immediate help. But she started with just one at a time.

It reminds one of the story about the man who was seen picking up beached starfish from the strand and throwing them back into the sea. Someone who was watching said, “You’re wasting your time. There are thousands of them; throwing back a handful will make no difference.” “It will make a difference to each one thrown back,” replied the man. I too can start with just one person – today.

To be a laborer in the harvest is for the happiness of others to be as important as your own. It is to experience inner peace and to be a bringer of peace to others. How life would be changed if we all tried to do that! What a difference it would make!
